CURRICULUM

CURRICULUM

Mr. Day Principal

(Anyone who has met and talked to the principal of our school finds it very hard to identify the warm and friendly man with that cold mechanical voice that greets all of Central each day with a "Good morning" and the Bible reading. I had the pleasure of an interview with our principal in November).

According to legend, a man named Sisyphus was doomed to a lifetime of rolling a huge rock to the top of a mountain. When he got the rock to the top, it always rolled back down to the bottom and he would have to start all over again.

In a sense, Mr. Day too is doomed to this fate. He has to work long and hard at setting up an efficient school machine and by the time his creation is completed and running smoothly, the school year has ended and he must start all over again. But, for all of its frustrations, our principal enjoys his work and is satisfied. "There is no set routine, . . . never a dull moment, . . . and I can go home after a day's work with a clear mind. I would do it all over again".

Does he respect the students? Yes! Mr. Day himself has a daughter in grade 12, and a son in grade 10. "Segregation", as we've coined it, or the separation of boys and girls in the cafeteria and at the entrances, is advocated by him, only because there are always the few in a group who spoil it for the many and force such rules to be made. (It's fact! I was reminded of some past incidents and, of course, our own Sadie Hawkins Day affair).

Leslie Foldessey

Our Vice-Principal Mr. Wilson graduated from Queen's University with an honours B.A. in Mathematics and Physics. Since graduating and before coming to Central, he obtained considerable experience. Busy seeing late or "errant" students, he concerns himself with the smooth running of the school, thereby hoping that the school becomes known for its fine student body, and the responsibility and maturity of its students. When I asked Mr. Wilson what he thought of the students in Central, he commented, "Generally, I find the students very good people to work with, in spite of the problems that some have." Although he has no real motto, he keeps in mind that whatever he does, is for the benefit of the students who will always be his prime concern. Next time you see Mr. Wilson, whether in the halls, or the office, remember the importance of his position in Central, and that his aim is to help you.

The Marquis of Halifax said, "Education is what remains when we have forgotten all that we have been taught." It is unlikely that many of us will long remember the characteristics of the sonnet or the meaning of metonymy, but our days at school will not have been in vain if there remains with us something of the ideas and ways of looking at life that we met in the classroom. These may have been encountered as we studied the writing of some master, or may have arisen casually in the discussion, or as we browsed in the library. Of some, we may have been only vaguely aware at the time; yet they remain to shape our entire outlook on life.

An important part of our education is learning to read critically and to express ourselves accurately. "Reading makes a full man," said Bacon, "conference a ready man, and writing an exact man." On the job, precision is required, and to understand the momentous events of our age we need an ability to sift truth from falsehood in the abundance of information that modern communications bring to us daily. In these days of almost universal literacy, we tend to forget that there are levels of understanding, and that we cannot afford to cease to learn.

Although we have television and spectator sports, let us remember the joys of reading that a liberal education brings. Emily Dickinson put it this way:

There is no frigate like a book
To take us lands away,
Nor any coursers like a page
Of prancing poetry.

This traverse may the poorest take
Without oppress of toll;
How frugal is the chariot
That bears a human soul!

Language Department

Languages should represent to you the most glamorous, most challenging field of education in our entire curriculum. In my department we teach you French and German.

French! What a fabulous word: When you hear it, visions of Paris, the city of lights and magnificence flash through your mind.

The lilt of magnificent French Operas, musicals and songs daily echo in our ears.

The names of French scientists, the Curries, Louis Pasteur, have become household words in the civilized world.

Your studies in French will be the introduction to an intimate acquaintance with the wonderful world of old France in Europe and New France in Canada.

The contribution of German men of letters, scientists and musicians are too great and numerous to mention.

In this school we begin the study of French in Grade 9 and carry it on for five years to graduation. Some of our students become so attached to it that they take six or seven years to graduate!

We start German in Grade 11.

Some of you may raise the question "Why do we study Languages?" If the enrichment of the mind, which I suggested, does not impress you sufficiently enough, I can offer you a second reason. The Universities demand it for admission to their hallowed portals. In plain language you cannot go to University unless you have at least one foreign language. Why? Because Universities think that even a modest knowledge of a Foreign Language is the measure of a cultured lady or gentleman.

If you wish a third reason, the knowledge of Foreign Languages is the key to a large number of fascinating, well-paying jobs — the diplomatic service, intergal, the international world-wide police organization, espionage — counter espionage — every one of you is a potential James Bond — or Mata Hari, queen of the lady spies. Foreign buying, international commerce and banking; united nation agencies abroad; all have great opportunities for persons who know foreign languages.

The greatest number of students study French for the very obvious reason that we are a bilingual country. Over one third of Canada's population have French as their first language. Now I would like to give you a few hints which should make your study of languages easier and more enjoyable.

To illustrate: In the French class you are performing — doing things, building up habits, saying things and understanding what other people are saying in French. At first you are not learning facts, but just building up habits — pronouncing French sentences and learning the right time to use the right sentence and getting so much practice that when you hear one of your French sentences you'll understand at once what it means.

We learn most easily when we pronounce half aloud. We profit immensely by listening to our own voice, uttering the foreign sounds. It is quite probable that most people learn language twice or three times more easily when they use their voices in the study of words, phrases and sentences. Study half aloud!

It is unwise to study vocabulary from word lists. Word lists are commendable for consultation and as a final check on words which we have previously read and studied in context. The best way to learn words is to read the text in which they occur so frequently that we are no longer conscious of reading a foreign language and that all the foreign words call up definite ideas immediately — in other words, that our comprehension of that particular text has become direct.

Learn vocabulary from context.

Repetition is the first requirement in all real learning. We seldom remember things which we have read, heard or learned only once. We must read, hear and learn them frequently if we want to retain them. This is especially true of languages which require us to form entirely new habits. There is only one safe way of learning for keeps, and that is frequent reviewing.

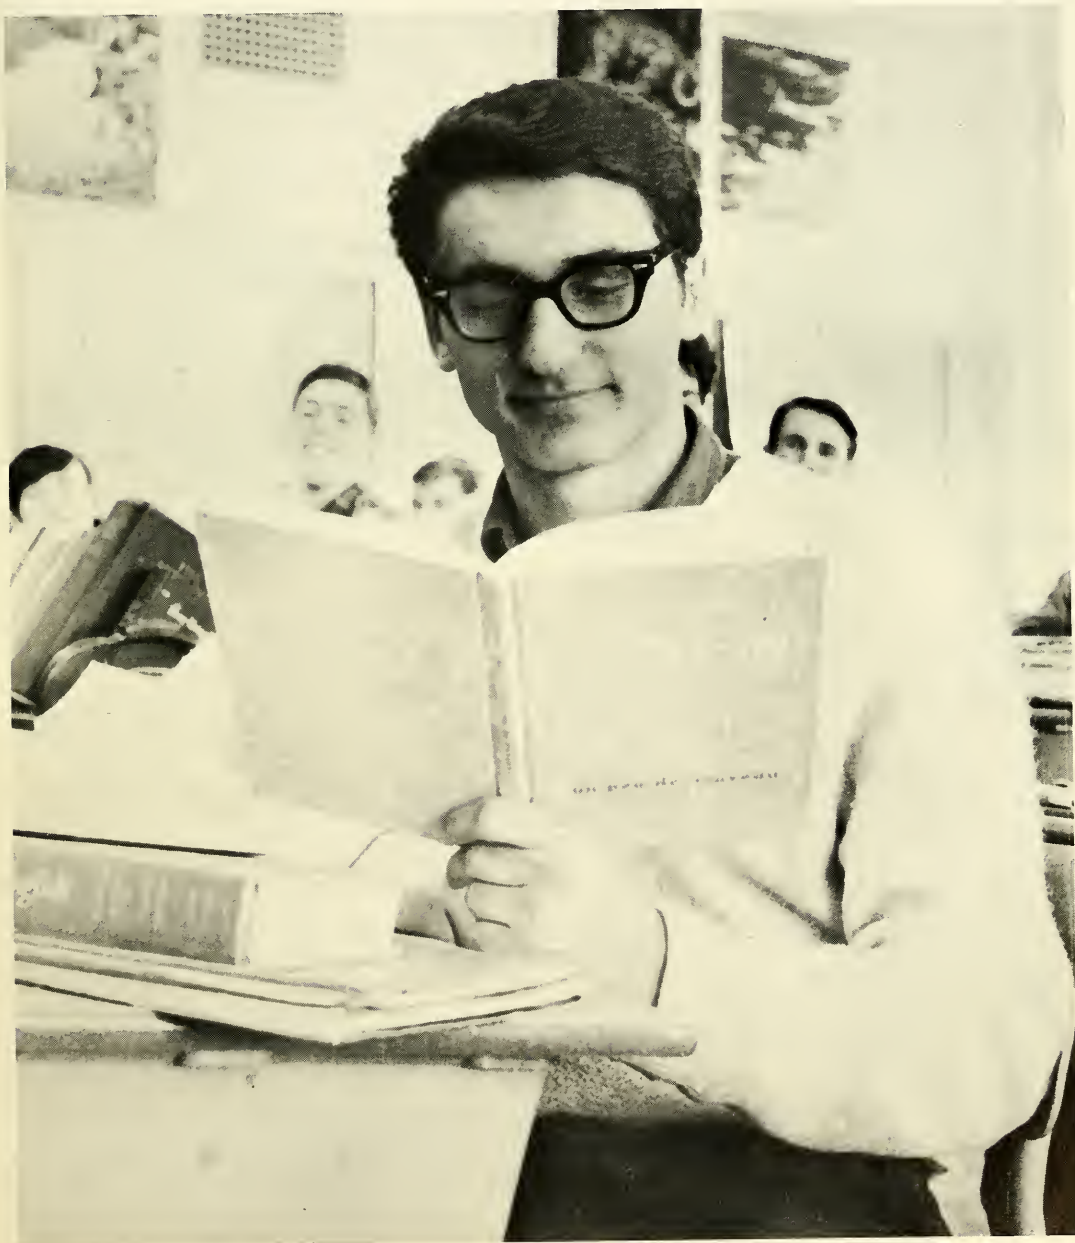

The aims represented in our foreign language classes are understanding and reading, writing and speaking. If you prefer one or two of these to the others, stress it or them in your homework. You learn to understand by listening, to read by reading, to speak by speaking, to write by writing and in no other way.

And now I wish you all a useful, and pleasant time mastering your favourite foreign language.

Geography Department

The Geography department at Central offers courses in all three programs, occupations, four year and five year.

In the occupations program it is a one year course that covers Canada and its world position.

In both grades nine and ten in the four and five year programs, Geography is a compulsory subject. The courses are composed of regional studies of Eurasia, Australia, New Zealand, Africa and the British Isles.

In the final three years of the five year program, Geography is an optional subject. Students who do well in History, Geography and Science in grades nine and ten usually find Geography a stimulating subject.

The grade eleven course applies these concepts to various regions around the world. Grade thirteen is the study of Canada.

There is a Geography course for the grade eleven and twelve four year Arts and Science program. It has been offered at Central in the past, but with the wide range of options already available at Central the Geography option has been discontinued for the present.

What is history? What is the purpose of studying history? Is there more than one kind of history? That is, is there one history for the student and another for the teacher? Perhaps the easiest answer is "history depends on who wrote it." For example, the story that you told to explain why you got in last night after twelve o'clock is also history, although it may not be true.

Here are a few outstanding definitions of history:

"History is, indeed little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind".
Gibbon, DECLINE AND FALL OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

"All history is contemporary history".
Crace, HISTORY AND CHRONICLE.

"History is the essence of innumerable biographies".
Thomas Carlyle, USE OF HISTORY.

"There can be no history of the past as it actually did happen; there can only be historical interpretations, and none of them final, and every generation has to frame its own".
Popper, POVERTY OF HISTORICISM.

"History has for its object everything that is intimate, everything that is passionate, everything that is of trivial or daily occurrence, all the colour and all the infinite variety of the past".
Trevelyan, THE RECREATIONS OF AN HISTORIAN.

Business and Commerce Department

We in the Business and Commerce Department are proud of the fact that we can offer to the students of Central a wide variety of educational opportunities. To those in the two- and four-year programs, we offer courses which are practical in nature and which thus prepare you for employment. Many of you in the four-year Program will be able to proceed to further education at the new Mohawk Community College.

We are also pleased that we can offer courses to five-year students that not only help to prepare you for possible employment after Grade 12, but also will contribute to your success in further education at University or elsewhere, and in your eventual occupation or profession.

The following is a partial list of the many different subject areas offered by our department:

Secretarial	Business Organization
Bookkeeping	Finance
Accounting	Law and Economics
Merchandising	Data Processing
Business Machines

Guidance Department

A suitable approach to the guidance program is spotlighted in a recent book by Elder, Brewer and Huff. It is very well worth reading in its entirety. Here are a few random thoughts from it.

As a secondary school student, you are expected to assume more responsibility for your own progress and decisions. This is one of the principal differences between elementary and secondary school. Most students like secondary school because they enjoy being treated like mature people.

Of course you will not be left entirely on your own, nor will you find your teachers calm and unconcerned if work is neglected. But the choice between actually working and just getting by, between being a serious or an immature student – gradually these choices will be your own.

Some of the major difficulties that beset students are the following:

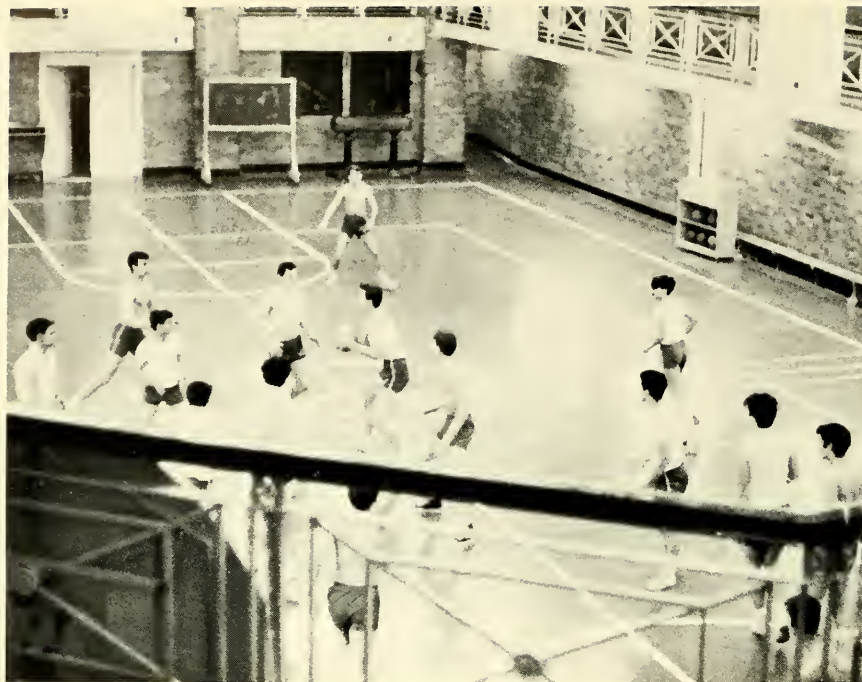

1. the intelligent budgeting of time.
2. uncertainty about vocation and educational goals.
3. confusion in the selection of subjects.
4. worries concerning social adjustment.

Obviously, you are not expected to cope with such problems on your own. To assist you, Guidance Services are available.

Guidance Services are also for your use. They are provided because you are an important person who from time to time may require assistance, not only with educational and career planning, but also with a number of other matters that pertain to you as a student.

The Guidance Department in your school offers the following services to you:

- Group Guidance Service
- Information Service
- Counselling Service
- Individual Record Service
- Placement Service
- Parents' Consultation Service
- Testing Service

Physical Education

Central's Boys' Physical Education program offers a varied range of activities. The department is staffed by Mr. D. Bryane, the head, from Queen's University; Mr. R. House, a graduate of the University of Toronto; and Mr. W. Knox, from McMaster. These gentlemen believe that a successful physical education program is one involving the maximum number of students in both inter-scholastic and intramural competition.

Using this Criterion, it must be said that the physical education program is a successful one indeed!

Presidents Message

This year under a competent executive including vice-president Tony Cafazzo, Susan Stojanovic, John Bodnaruk and Diane Tremain, the Student Council has been most actively involved in student affairs such as the Christmas Concert, Tea Dances and the Central Aid Program whereby we support our foster child in Vietnam.

As the representative of the student body, noon hour study rooms have been arranged and cafeteria conditions were improved in spite of our cramped accommodations.

Meetings were held twice a month and were run entirely by the students. We wish to extend especially sincere thanks to our teacher-advisors Mr. Kershaw and Mr. Jackson, without whom we would have accomplished much less.

Finally, I want to thank all the students and teachers of Central that have co-operated and given their support to the Student Council.

☆ MODERN COURSES

Our courses, final examinations and diplomas are under the direction of the Business Educators' Association of Canada. Our courses are constantly being revised in the light of modern business. Next year, we plan to teach "Introduction to Business Data Processing."

☆ MODERN EQUIPMENT

Thousands of dollars worth of new equipment has been purchased during the past four years. This includes 40 new typewriters.

☆ MODERN METHODS

We have a large staff of competent, experienced teachers who keep in touch with up-to-date methods.

Editorial

As our Centennial 66 - 67 school year comes to a close, I'd like to thank all the students and patient teachers that made this year's book possible. I would also like to express sincere thanks to Mr. Trollope who deserves a great deal of credit.

We hope that this book will recall memories of scholastic activities and the strong school spirit which we have experienced this year.

This year's book is a bit different and we hope better than those of previous years. We made more considerations to the undergrads and various departments and we hope that this book will be a milestone for future improvements.

Being our Centennial year, we hope that the students have a prosperous school year and I wish the same in years to come.

What price education?

It is beyond price! Education cannot be bought, borrowed, or inherited. The only way to obtain it, is to earn it. Stelco recognizes its value, and the increasing need for it, in today's highly-competitive atmosphere ... and also recognizes that specialized education is denied to many deserving young Canadians through lack of funds. This is why Stelco sponsors a program of assistance to universities, technical schools, and students across Canada, by providing awards, scholarships and bursaries in Technology, Engineering, Science, Business Administration, Teaching, Commerce, and Finance.

For further information on this program, or on a career in steel, write to Stelco's Head office in Hamilton, Ontario.
